Nebula3.2-3, September 2006 Re-imagining Healing after Trauma: Leslie Marmon Silko and Judith Butler Writing against the War of Cultures. Sophie Croisy In this essay, I want to deal with contemporary traumatic issues at play mainly in the work of Judith Butler and Leslie Marmon Silko who are, in more ways than one, theorists of trauma, though they are not officially acknowledged as such.

In psychology, dissociation is any of a wide array of experiences from mild detachment from immediate surroundings to more severe detachment from physical and emotional experiences. The major characteristic of all dissociative phenomena involves a detachment from reality, rather than a loss of reality as in psychosis.. Dissociation is commonly displayed on a continuum.

A man walks into a bank! Sounds like the opening line of a joke. However, there is no humor in this tale. The man tells the bank’s customer service representative that he is the executive director of a humanitarian aid organization that provides food and shelter to displaced persons (aka refugees) around the world.
